Superintendent

Sir;

In reply to the inquiry obtained in the letter of Mr Preston of the 4th inst, relative to the existence of any "regular set of rules for the government of the Assistants in this Mint", I beg to say, that I have never known of the existence of any special rules for that purpose. They are required to be here on time and to attend to their duty during the prescribed working hours, and while at work are subject to the directions of the Coiner and such personal instructions as the Superintendent may have to give at times as the pressure upon the Mint for Coinage may require - I do not see any occasion for a formal set of rules for the guidance of our Adjutors.

As far as this Mint is concerned, there never has been a time when the above has not been found thoroughly adequate and sufficient to meet any and all emergencies, and any demands which may be made upon us.

Very Respectfully
